Course: The UN Sustainable Development Goals

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, adopted by all United Nations Member States in 2015, provides a shared blueprint for peace and prosperity for people and the planet, now and into the future. At its heart are the 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), which are an urgent call for action by all countries - developed and developing - in a global partnership. They recognize that ending poverty and other deprivations must go together with strategies that improve health and education, reduce conflict and inequality, and spur economic growth – all while tackling climate change and working to preserve our oceans and forests. Among all the role of international politics in this regard is huge.

The SDGs motto is 'No one should be left alone'. With this motto universities and students are active stakeholders in the implementation of the goals. This seminar will give the students the necessary skill, knowledge and solid foundation about each SDG goals and the instruments related to the implementation, monitoring and evaluation.

The goal of this seminar is to equip students with the necessary and up-to-date SDGs progress, implementation, challenges and also to discuss about the remedies. Through discussions and case studies (preliminary results), students will be informed the success stories of countries, regions, and continents. The seminar will also give each student the opportunity to ask oneself about the role they can play in small steps that contribute to the success of the SDGs.
